Russia Backs Radical Spain
Vile Grave Desecration

Everybody in Europe suspects everybody else, usually with good reason. When a British English point, showing how near he could fly in the French liner Normandie, landed at a port on a baggage derrick and flung his plane across the bow of the ship, many excited Europeans were perfectly certain that the Frenchman had done this, hoping to set fire to the Normandie, because the Queen Mary had not been the Normandie's speed record.

Complications seemed already, and that may count throughout Europe, for the war is in Spain, are hard to understand in America, where our states, with no thought of war, spread from coast to coast.

Soon after the Spanish revolt started the British began building the battle with entanglements around their Gibraltar territory, to keep the lights off their land and perhaps keep out undesirable refugees from both sides.

The French, who have an alliance with Russia, suspect some Frenchmen in the radical government. France, and Spain, like to stay out of the quarrel and, according to report, refused to send weapons, ammunition to a Spanish warship that came to get help.

British sympathies violently with the radical government, that some countries, Spain, and English newspapers report Russia is using and proving France to side with the Madrid government.

French Communist papers accuse Italy and Germany of sending airplanes to help the Spanish insurgents. Russia, with her big fleet of powerful bombing planes, could easily supply Madrid with ammunition if she so wished, but it might be more convenient to let the French pull Moscow's strings out of the fire.

It is reported on the point of sailing with the Spanish insurgents against the radical Madrid regime, because the Spanish attacks made on Spain officers in Russia. It is reported that a woman in charge of the Hitler office was threatened with death if she would not reveal the whereabouts of her principal, dragged into the office for some reason, and with a gun pointed at her head.

After arriving in all reports, including official statements to the British House of Commons, as a very big war machine already. It would be very simple for him to wipe out the radical government at Madrid, and wipe out Madrid at the same time.

The difficulty is that there would be no gain or profit for Germany in leading Spain to start a fight they might start fighting, anyway.

Russia is violently against the Spanish and against the Madrid's radical regime. It would send the Russian gun to have Spain's great Communist headquarters, looking on the Mediterranean and the Atlantic, to effect the Russian and Communist. Russian government, give safe, hospitable landing to Russia's air fleets, and perhaps send ships for any warships that she might send through the Bosphorus.

England, as reported as a more and more serious look out in the middle of a great fight and without anybody would stop it, would be a very serious matter to know the peace of mind again. Several of the most important stations, called on Prime Minister Baldwin and for two hours last night, what they knew about airplane building in Central Europe and other matters.

Winston Churchill made a speech against Russia, Germany, and Austria. Churchill, in his speech, said that he had been in the middle of the war, and he had seen the war from the inside.

NORMA MILLEN

tells her story of

THE ROAD BACK

"No longer am I bitter or despondent though society demands more payment than the months I spent in jail," says the girl who was a central figure in the Faber-Millen case.

Slowly fighting her way back, at first using another name to escape unwelcome attention, she is now determined, she says, "to fight my own fight and face the world as NORMA MILLEN... no longer can people hurt me with curious stares and whispers which I often overhear."

Read Norma Millen's own story which tells in her own words her sufferings and hopes.

ACCIDENTS CAN BE AVOIDED?

(A Short Story)

The Reverend Willard H. Baker felt that he was trying a new idea for his Sunday night sermon. He was preaching a sermon on safety dealing with automobiles.

"Consider this $99 out of every 1000 avoided UN-AVAILABLE automobile accidents are AVOIDABLE. Most of these so-called unavoidable accidents are caused, either directly or indirectly, by negligence!"

"For example," Those accidents that are caused by mechanical faults could and CAN be avoided by a systematic, periodic inspection of all major parts of an automobile. Our lives depend upon the mechanical safety of our cars just as a pilot's life depends upon the mechanical safety of his airplane.

"My warning is clear. If you are not sure whether your car will have the way you intend it to or not, be doubly careful. If you are positive that it will do just as you want it to, be careful anyway!"

Perhaps the most interesting letter was Mr. George Warren. After the last hymn had been sung, he, with the rest of the congregation, went their respective ways home. As George Warren got into bed that night he thought of the sermon. "That was a remarkable sermon. I hope the Reverend has more of them."

The following morning Mr. George Warren read the Morning Journal and was very much shocked to find the following: "MINISTER KILLED" "Haverhill, N. H.—The Reverend Willard H. Baker was killed instantly killed at 9:25 last night when he was struck by a car in front of his home on Gilman street. The driver claims that accident was unavoidable." (Any similarity of names or events in this story with those in real life is purely coincidental.)

New du Maurier Yarn Rivals Poe's Mysteries

Hit down on an evening and read "Jasmine Day," by Daphne du Maurier (Roundelay House, 1800), a gruesome enough novel, full of diabolical and blood-curdling incidents which stir your imagination to a height that only Poe's works could emulate.

This harrowing tale revolves around one Mary Yellian, who, in obedience to her dream, enters a convent to live with her aunt, Patience, and her uncle, John Martin. The first is a beautiful and feared by all. Even the coachman, who takes her there in the black hours of night drives away like mad.

Mary discovers that her uncle is an insane, mad, homicidal individual, the leader of a gang of thugs, murderers and evildoers of all sorts.

Mary falls in love with her uncle's brother, John, who is a brave thief. John and his wife are established in the back of the house and Mary joins in to it. Then he came back and was killed by John. The first game of a double-headed game against the brother and the wife. It was he who had murdered her uncle.

There are four major league pitchers who stand in the select circle of having won three games in one world's series. They are Christy Mathewson of the Giants, who turned the trick in the 1905 series; Charles Adams of the Pirates, in 1909; John Coulter of the Athletics, in 1910; and Stan Coveleski of the Cleveland club, in the 1920 series.

The Boston Red Sox have played in 32 world's series games and have secured at least one win in every contest. The Boston club is the only one to escape a shutout in world's series competition.

In a game played on Sept. 10, 1905, their pitcher, the Athletics' John Coulter, played nine different positions to win different innings. That game was credited as being the winning pitcher.

Ed Russell, of the Chicago Cubs, shut out the Brooklyn Dodgers twice on the same day. On Sept. 26, 1905, Russell pitched the first game of a double-header against the Brooklyn Dodgers. He pitched in both games and won both.

"Babe" Ruth has been on a world's championship team in four different years. He pitched in 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918.

There are four major league pitchers who stand in the select circle of having won three games in one world's series. They are Christy Mathewson of the Giants, who turned the trick in the 1905 series; Charles Adams of the Pirates, in 1909; John Coulter of the Athletics, in 1910; and Stan Coveleski of the Cleveland club, in the 1920 series.

The Boston Red Sox have played in 32 world's series games and have secured at least one win in every contest. The Boston club is the only one to escape a shutout in world's series competition.

In a game played on Sept. 10, 1905, their pitcher, the Athletics' John Coulter, played nine different positions to win different innings. That game was credited as being the winning pitcher.

Ed Russell, of the Chicago Cubs, shut out the Brooklyn Dodgers twice on the same day. On Sept. 26, 1905, Russell pitched the first game of a double-header against the Brooklyn Dodgers. He pitched in both games and won both.

"Babe" Ruth has been on a world's championship team in four different years. He pitched in 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918.

Mary Day Dewart to Become Bride of Benjamin Goodale

By BETTY ALDEN

THE REV. WILLIAM HERBERT DEWART, rector of the Church of the North Church, Boston, and Mrs. Dewart, are announcing today the engagement of their daughter, Mary Day Dewart, to Benjamin Goodale, son of Percy Allen Goodale of Park Avenue, New York, and Falmouth, and the late Mrs. Hope Leonard Goodale of New Bedford.

Miss Dewart, who is the granddaughter of the late Honorable William Augustus Russell of Boston, and the late Rev. James Hartley Dewart, D. D., of St. Paul, Minnesota, was graduated from Milton Academy and later studied at La Petite Ecole, Florence. She is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club and made her debut last autumn.

Mr. Goodale is a graduate of Brown and Nichols School in Cambridge. He is a brother of Mr. Robert L. Goodale of Cambridge and Mr. Percy A. Goodale.

An outdoor badminton match will be the feature of the fair for the benefit of the Children's Hospital, which is to be held at the Nahant Club on September 3 under the auspices of members of the club.

Mrs. Maurine Beal has undertaken to engage one of the fastest combinations of players to be procured and has also assumed the responsibility of seeing that the tennis court is temporarily transformed to accommodate the players. Ken Davidson, Scottish singles, doubles and mixed doubles champion, Mr. Dever, manager of the Boston Badminton Club, Roland Jackson, retired undefeated Scottish champion player, and Noel Radford, a famous Canadian champion, are all going to take part in the exhibition. . . . and as a special concession to husbands and fathers of the committee, the match will not be held until five o'clock so that bankers and stock brokers can get down to Nahant in time to sit on the external grass gallery and watch the games.

Mr. Lindsay Moly is general chairman of the committee planning the fair and one of her ablest and most willing assistants is Mrs. Charles Devens. Edith Wolcott, . . . Mrs. Willis Beal is putting her crayons and paints to good use to design colorful posters reminding one and all to attend the fair. . . . Rosamond Blanchard is chairman of the ticket committee. . . .

Nahant's twin debutantes, Anna and Clemence Hobbs, who took charge of the grab at last year's fair, are doing so again. . . . and others who are helping out generally include Mrs. Richard Harris, Mrs. Louis Curtis, Jr., both of whom are away at present but have promised to come back in time to do their bit for the event. . . . Mrs. Alexander Grant and Mrs. Thomas Storrow. . . .

Richard Cartwright, president of the Boston society of magicians, will give an exhibit of magic during the afternoon.

Treasure Auction Sale Planned

MR. AND MRS. HENRY LUTELL MASON'S estate in Priddy Crossing will have with activity all afternoon, August 15 when some of the energetic women interested in the welfare of the Boston Music School Settlement and the Beverly Farms Music School, start a benefit treasure auction sale.

Bayard Tuckerman, hotel spokesman, will turn auctioneer for the afternoon and will bring the heavy gavel down with a heavy thud as he acquiesces sale after sale of rare old treasures of china, pictures and furniture. . . . He will be assisted by Glendora Bonfield of Mayhew and Otto M. Stenfield of Westport, Ct. . . .

Mrs. William Garbath Mitchell of Beverly Farms, who has an eye for the unusual and novel, is in charge of the many and valuable treasures to be sold.

Soon after the buyers arrive and have time to look over the stock, an Italian luncheon will be served with a bevy of society girls acting as waitresses. . . . Maria Stevenson, the head waitress, has obtained the assistance of Anne Blake, Barbara Brewer, Nancy Cassin, Louise Stevens, Elizabeth Van Antwerp and her twin sister, Mimi Van Antwerp. . . .

Dog Show on North Shore

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES FANNING AYER of Hamilton will entertain Oliver C. Harriman of New York, as their house guest over the weekend of August 20. . . . Mr. Harriman will serve as a judge of Dachshund and fox terriers and will also select the best dog in show at the North Shore Kennel Club's third annual outdoor dog show on Saturday, the 29th, at the Myopia Schooling Field. . . .

Quite a few other visitors will be here from out of town, including Mrs. Whelan, Page of Milford, N. Y., who is to officiate as judge in the obedience test trials and who will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Justin Grise. . . . The Gilbert Stewards will have as their guests Robert Sedgwick of New York City, judge of sturdle terriers, Scotch terriers and Setters, and T. Dineen, son of Smith of Boston, whose knowledge of the heavy dogs, like Great Danes and Newfoundland, has won him the honor of judging them at the North Shore show. . . . Mr. Smith will also judge the sporting and terrier varieties. . . .

Chatty Notes of Society

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Bell of Hyde Park, N. Y., are receiving invitations to the annual dinner of the North Shore Kennel Club on Tuesday, August 18, at the former Mrs. Mary Kinschiff Mayne of Bedford. The baby will be named, Diana, Charles Bell.

Miss Laura Blake of Dedham and Charles May, Miss Anna Gray of Oyster Harbor and Miss Betty Swift of Woods Hole will act as models at the fashion show to be presented by the Charlotte V. de Lamoignon, possibly translated from the great Thomas de Lamoignon.

It is only with the most painstaking effort that Brother Andrew has been able to read this guide-book to a Christian life, but so well has this little, little, black-robed brother learned his lesson that examination is freely granted for him by many of Canada's outstanding Roman Catholic clergymen.

VINCENT CLUB MEMBER ANNOUNCES ENGAGEMENT

MISS MARY DEWART, whose engagement to Benjamin Goodale is being announced today by her parents, Rev. and Mrs. William Herbert Dewart of Boston and Manchester, Miss Dewart is a member of the Vincent Club and Junior League; and Mr. Goodale, son of Mr. Percy Allen Goodale of Park Avenue, New York, attended Brown & Nichols School.

Montreal's 'Miracle Man'

World Ill Because It Lacks Faith, Says Brother Andre

Seventh and final chapter in an interesting series describing the life of Brother Andre, Montreal's 'Miracle Man'.

By PEGGY DOYLE

Montreal, Aug. 15.—"Always be prepared to die," That is Brother Andre's message to the people of New England, who rival the native French-Canadians in their devotion to St. Joseph, Canada's patron saint.

Always be prepared to die," he repeated the words, earnestly, in his thin, rasping voice.

"We think less of the most important thing that is to happen to us."

"Death is all around us. It may happen to us at any moment. We should be ready for it."

His astounding "monstrous" message had been voiced by the diminutive "Miracle Man of Montreal" after the Boston Evening American representative had suggested that he might have some words to give to this great newspaper's readers in this concluding article.

Even reluctant to be interviewed, he had consented to reveal information for this series of articles concerning his simple life of dramatic self-sacrifice and was finally made to do so only when he was approached by his beloved St. Joseph's father of the CHIN-CHU.

Pilgrims' Rush

A continually replenished line of pilgrims, whose packed motor-cars indicated that they came from virtually every state in the union as well as many European countries, overflowed the sidewalk outside the shrine and the adjoining bureau de renseignements.

Automobiles, he placed toward the door through which they would enter as he made brief answers to the questions put to him.

Then, suddenly, a little girl from the chair he occupied behind a shelf in the middle of his bare, cell-like office. Even smaller than his reputed first wife, he seemed, as he bent his frail back by sickness and age.

His intention was not immediately apparent, but he had leaped on a chair and from there, over the railing, he had descended to the ground, where he was waiting for the next pilgrim.

"Brother Andre, you shouldn't exert yourself—let me do that," "I'll do it later," he told his visitor, smiling.

It is quite possible the clock did not require waiting. It may be that the whole business was little

Star's Formula for Glamor

Beautiful June Lang Tells Of Simple Routine for Grace and Health

By JUNE LANG

(Copyright 1936, by American Newspaper, Inc.)

NEXT TO A beautiful figure, "the eyes have it!" Exercises are a great help in preventing eye strain. Sit down comfortably and look away up out of the left corners of your eyes. Then look down out of the right corners.

Then reverse—look up to the right and down to the left. Also, roll the eyes slowly around, first in one direction and then the other. This will strengthen the eyes and keep them open.

I bathe my eyes in boric acid just before I go to bed, and I go to sleep with the solution still in them. It is very soothing.

Another health and beauty necessity is brushing the teeth. I use tooth powder on rising and brushing, and if I change my make-up, I scrub my teeth again. I use mouth wash after each meal, and, most important of all, I see my dentist every three months.

I never have my face or body massaged. I don't think it is good for the muscles—the way they are pulled around—and I feel it's bound to break down the figure instead of building it up. For tanning, I take sunbaths as much better than massage. Or why not use a clean, sun-baked towel? Baked towels are what I use.

Perhaps you don't realize how much good disposition helps beauty. Think of your good points and how to develop them; they will cover up your defects. This will keep away those frowns and give you a sparkle. Here are a few more small beauty tips: Every morning when you get up it is good to stretch all over. Then go up and down on your toes with your arms stretched behind you.

This is for balance. And did you know whitening is good for a "charming mouth"? Also, don't forget to drink lots and lots of water.

One of the greatest aids to charm and beauty is a perfectly natural manner without pose. Yet a manner that is poised and graceful. I don't like loud people, but I do like a hearty laugh and a good, husky shake.

Poise is also a factor in wearing clothes smartly. If a girl has poise, perfect posture, and walks well, how chic a tailored suit, for instance, will look on her—and I love tailored suits, myself, especially with subtle.

Here are some of my preferences when it comes to wearing clothes smartly. I wear more blue in any other color. I think that blue is the most important feature to consider in selecting colors. People with red hair should be especially careful. I like to dress whenever I go out in the evening. I don't like costume jewelry. I don't like flthy things and insist on very simple, quite sophisticated evening gowns even if I am only 19!

Members of the Guild of Infant-Birdmen are looking forward with enthusiasm to the bridge and tea, which will be given at the home of Mrs. Joseph A. Ahern of Hawthorne, on Wednesday afternoon, August 19.

The proceeds of the affair will swell the guild's maternity fund. Assisting Mrs. Ahern is a committee of guild members and their friends who are summing on the South Shore and popular Cape residents.

Maine's rockbound coast and the dunes of the Cape are equally represented in the summer roster of the Age of Club members.

Mildred Menning and Mrs. George McLaughlin, a member of the board, who is summing at Beechwood in the Granite state, are Mrs. James Walsh of Chatham, who is summing at Nahant, and Mrs. Joseph A. Berry, Jr., of West Roxbury and her attractive family. She was Catherine Foley of Boston.

South Shore holds a fascination for Alice Duxley, who is vacationing at Cohasset, and Esther Henderson is entering into the young set affairs at Marblehead.

Other popular club members summing at the shore are Rose and Mary Fitzgerald and Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr.

Studio Guest Tells of Bustling Scenes On Hollywood Lots

By Boston Evening American Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 15.—Mid-summer activity on the "lots" this week was bustling and interesting.

Directed by Dick Powell on the left and Joan Blondell on the right, a studio guest tells of the bustling scenes on the "lots" this week. "There's no doubt at all which set you should visit first," said Dick. "Who's new here? Is he or she here in the streets beyond the studio stage? It would cost you $50."

"Who wants to look an egg?" Joan interrupted. "I'm not a big, cool blue-green complexioned girl, but I'll come over to the studio stage, shall I, or shall I not?"

"And hundreds of high-powered lights, glaring down at everything," added Joan.

"But the girls in bathing suits in the pool? The beautiful dames on the tennis court?" commented Dick.

Tough Country

In addition, Dick Powell was seen to be doing with a hammer to the "bottle" and William Keighly D. walked to Standard with a stone the road from a film lot.

"This China," commented Mr. Powell, "is a pretty tough country."

In Cullen, the Mayor-Gordon Mayor is concerned with the production. "The Devil is a man," said Powell. "He's a man who is not a man and is not a man."

"Let's go over your dialogue," said Powell. "If you get the idea, I'll come over to the studio stage as soon as this picture is finished. There, when you're finished you can come to M.C.M. with me."

Wedding Scene

After going through the first scene, the wedding scene, the director was seen to be doing with a hammer to the "bottle" and William Keighly D. walked to Standard with a stone the road from a film lot.

Liquor Profits Fail to Benefit Maine Cities

Augusta, Me., Aug. 15.—The magnitude of the operations of the Maine State Liquor Commission, a political as well as a government organization, are shown in the results of its finances for the fiscal year just ended, here publicly presented for the first time.

The year's profit—$433,118.40 on liquor trading and licenses, and $141,610.00 on malt beverages combined, have already been stated in this column.

The Liquor Commission finished the fiscal year with a surplus of $1,188,000.00, which is a record for the commission.

'A Dog's Life'

The Boy Who Nearly Died for Dog And Then Lost Him

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY!

I'm changing the title, "A Dog's Life," on my story for today and I guess that hardly will do much to distinguish it from my other yarns. But when you come right down to it I might as well have left the "dog" part of it out and just called it "Life," because—well—because we all get the same sort of breaks, whether we're dogs or humans or, for that matter, chimpanzees or aardvarks.

Our yarn today comes from James Kennedy of New York City. But before I tell you about Jim's adventure I'm going to tell you about another tragic incident, because it's got a lot in common with Jim's experience and because it serves to illustrate my point. The story I'm going to tell you is about a boy. Jim's tale is about a dog. But there's a nearly identical when you read them, and I think that the same mean imp of fate was responsible for both of them; that the same old Harpy that deals out the world's lousiest luck plays her mean trick on humans and animals alike.

The incident I'm going to tell about is one that I read in a newspaper. You probably saw it too. Remember a white bull when the floods were devastating just about the whole country, that story about a young lad down in Pennsylvania, who saved a lot of people?

He was an active lad and a good swimmer, and all the time the water was rising, he was in there working for all he was worth to get people out of their homes and release their suffering. Time and again he took chances with the raging waters.

For days on end he worked like that, in water that rose up to the second floor of the buildings. He worked until the flood began to subside—until it had gone completely.

And then, just a day or two after it was all over, he went out for a walk. He tripped and fell in a mud puddle. As he fell, his head struck something hard and he was knocked unconscious.

And so he drowned—in six inches of water.

THAT TO MY MIND WAS THE MOST EMBARRASSING OF ALL THE FATEFUL THINGS THAT CAME OUT OF ANY OF THE MANY FLOOD AREAS SCATTERED OVER THE COUNTRY. IT FLASHED INTO MY MIND WHEN I READ JIMMY KENNEDY'S STORY BECAUSE IT'S SO MUCH LIKE THE TALE OF HOW JIMMY GOT A DOG AND LOST HIM.

Jim's dog didn't have a dog—didn't have a dog—didn't even think about dogs when it all happened. It was a warm day in June, 1935, and Jimmy was waiting out of printing several days.

He had come to the East River, and was waiting out of view from a dock where white boats at that time were waiting to take a dog home, and Jimmy was waiting some two hundred feet out.

The dog, Jimmy says, looked exhausted and must have fallen off one of the boats in the river. He was barking this way and that and jumping about.

Well, the dog was barking. The weather was hot and he was a good swimmer, so he just naturally picked up the clothes, and giving them to the old man who guarded the dock, dove in the water. It was early on a Sunday morning and nobody was around to see him.

The dog, Jimmy says, was running pretty fast and took him down the river, but he had no trouble reaching the dog. The dog was a water spaniel—a good swimmer, incidentally.

But he was all in, and when Jimmy reached him he lost no time climbing on Jimmy's back.

And there was Jimmy's trouble started. The dog's claws dug into his back and he could not get away from him.

Jimmy found a way on his back and with the dog on his chest he took him home and presented himself with a weary, aching, aching, aching face.

But when Jimmy came to him and Jimmy got weary a ducking, he found a way for Jimmy to look at it was just his luck, that the dog would drown. The dog of the Empress, or Public Christian, named up to town of him, and Jimmy stayed as well as he could from him.

But the dog was now that sinking out of the water onto a dock in his own way, jumping off of him. There was no place to get out of and he was tired.

The dog, too, in spite of all, wanted fighting and clawing for all his own sake. Jimmy knew the dog would never make it if he let go of him, so he held on. He pulled slowly around the end of the dock, and then he was in the water for good.

AND, JUST AS IN THE STORY OF THE DOG AND THE DOCK, WHEN THE DOG THOUGHT HE MUST DROP THE DOG AND SAVE HIMSELF, HE SHOOTED A LOOK BACK MOORED TO THE DOCK BUILDING.

It is on the left Jimmy pulled his reward and then climbed on his back and took a nice long rest. He was tired, he says, but contented and happy that he had done his "good deed" for that dog.

They found Jimmy and the dog on the raft and pulled them up on the dock, and the story should end there. But it doesn't. Unfortunately, there is a sad ending—there is often in the true stories of real life.

Jimmy took the dog home with him. "My business," he says, "was to get the dog home, and the dog, while waiting, arrived the time to get the dog home. He brought the whole of a truck to his house."

Well, that's the way to keep him. I guess that's a pretty good way to keep him. Don't you?

That story up and down in the last issue, Monday, was a dog and a boy.

NEW SCREEN FIND

Simone Simon Met Star

By MARION FRENCH

Simone Simon, young French actress who stars with Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton in "Girl's Dormitory," the new picture at the Metropolitan Theatre, is one screen personality who lives up to the many nice things her press representabetween the lovely young girl and the blarney before the picture is over. Miss Chatterton like what happens as a result of this encounter... we didn't, but then maybe Miss Chatterton gives too sympathetic a performance here as a victim of unrequited love. The picture is splendid as the schoolmaster and appears romantic enough to warrant all the affection he receives in the film. Miss Chatterton has quite a different role here than in My Sister Sam, but she handles it with the great skill which always typifies her work.

The supporting cast of this unusually interesting picture turns out to be a fine lot. It includes, besides Miss Chatterton, Dickie Dunbar, John Qualen and Tyrone Power, Jr. but it is to Miss Simon that getting home in "Gerry's Territory" must go without reservations.
